
Tell Me More's Summer Blend Book Club exploring being mixed race and multicultural, NPR, 2011

Join TMM's Summer Blend Book Club

Source: NPR

by Amy Ta and Lena Moses- Schmitt

June 16, 2011

"In 2000, the U.S. government — for the first time — gave census takers the option to identify themselves with more than one race. That year, 6.8 million Americans selected two or more races. In 2010, 9 million did.

These numbers paint a portrait of an increasingly diverse America — and of Americans who are becoming more comfortable identifying themselves as multicultural and mixed race. And it's no surprise that this shift has been reflected in the country's literature as well.

This summer, Tell Me More read stories and novels — by and about people — exploring what it means to be mixed race. Heidi Durrow, author of The Girl Who Fell From The Sky, helped us kick off the series.

Here are all the books in our series — click on the title to read an author interview and an excerpt.

-

You Are Free by Danzy Senna

-

The Latte Rebellion by Sarah Jamila Stevenson

- Pym by Mat Johnson

- Take One Candle Light A Room by Susan Straight

Thanks for joining our Summer Blend Book Club!"

Link to Article

Link to Book Series